“The TOEIC test has become a must and one of the key criteria in our recruitment.”

Chuchu Pan, Assistant Manager, Human Resources Department,
CAMCO International

For global energy leaders, the power to connect with the world begins with the TOEIC® tests.

As the world seeks innovations in energy development and delivery, companies specializing in this category look to recruit, hire and promote professionals with the right English-language skills. The TOEIC® tests can help them be more effective in making key personnel decisions.

The TOEIC tests are the global standard for workplace English-language assessment.

ETS, an industry leader in English-language assessment for over 60 years, designed the TOEIC tests to measure workplace English skills. In fact, more than 10,000 organizations in 120 countries rely on the TOEIC tests to demonstrate English proficiency. Test questions are based on real-life situations typically encountered on the job or during everyday activities. The TOEIC test administration is also standardized, which gives all test takers an equal opportunity to demonstrate their proficiency, regardless of their age, gender, nationality or industry background.

Industry leaders know the TOEIC tests are good for business
